.. this gameplay demo reveals the astonishing real world speed and responsiveness of the game's breakneck visuals and physics. The Need for Speed: Hot Pursuit demo is now available at and you'll be able to get your hands on it by August 30th. We can go ahead and talk about everyone's favorite criminal class, the assassin. Yes, we've released an Assassin's Creed 3 Time Trial. It's called "The Obelisk," and it's 4:39. The tower is a 320M island, and you will only get two guns -- the Redemption Knife (LB) and the Hidden Blade (LB). There are no guards and no NPCs to kill, so this is the best practice for getting the most experience. The knife will also help clear the hood, so if you need to, you can go on two guns and still make the Obelisk. If you're interested in checking out the full version of The Obelisk, it is available at www.eagledigital.com/games/a-z. We will also continue to release some pretty cool custom maps throughout the course of this game. Check out the custom island section of our site for the full list of island customizers. You can also download our custom maps by pressing F5, or finding them in your My Game List. For players who cannot wait to experience the next installment in the Need for Speed series, you'll have the chance to experience the exhilarating action as soon as we unveil the Need for Speed: Most Wanted demo in just a couple of days at www.needforspeed.com. The Need for Speed: Most Wanted demo will be available on Aug. 21st, the same day that the title launches. We are very excited about the coming games from Electronic Arts, DICE, and Ghost Games. With Need for Speed: Most Wanted and Star Wars: The Old Republic, both coming this fall, it's clear that there is a lot of new life coming into the adventure genre. There are always new technologies to harness, new worlds to explore and new needs to satisfy. By continuing to play, evolve and innovate, we believe that the adventure genre will only get stronger.
