I want to be able to set a different value for each of the distributions that the user is on without having to edit the bash script. I have been trying to do this for quite a while, and have come up with the following `#!/bin/bash user=`whoami` distribution=${"${SSH_SESSION:0:0}"} echo $distribution` This is what I have done so far, however it's not exactly giving the correct output. `-bash-4.1$./dist.sh root -bash-4.1$./dist.sh test -bash-4.1$` So how can I set the distribution to something from the environment? Or otherwise set the string to some random string each time. A: I'm not sure what you expected to get when you did `user=`whoami``, but you don't need that. You can use the `env` command to set values in the environment from the command line. `#!/bin/bash distribution= env distribution=${"${SSH_SESSION:0:0}"} echo $distribution` Or if you just want to set it as the default and leave the user's environment untouched `#!/bin/bash distribution=${"${SSH_SESSION:0:0}"} export distribution` For what you actually want to do, you're better off using the shell construct `#!/bin/bash [["${SSH_SESSION:0:0}" = "test"]] echo "${distribution:-default}"` This uses a shell feature called Parameter Expansion. A: See this post for some ideas how to do it, or try these solutions: What is the best way to run a Java web application with Tomcat? Catholic Church in Switzerland The Catholic Church is a minority religion in Switzerland., there were approximately 140,000 Catholics of foreign origin, most of them Italian, and about 870,000 Swiss. There are also many with a German background, the United States being the country most represented, and the Vatican itself is also made up of Swiss people. History The Catholic faith first came to Switzerland in the 16th century, with the arrival of missionaries from Austria and northern Italy to spread the Christian faith. In the 17th and 18th centuries, the greatest wave of Christian immigration to the canton of Geneva came from the Brescia area (Italy) and the Neuenburg area in the south (Austria). This came to a halt following the wars that took place between France and Austria, and the French Revolution which began in 1789. The Catholic Church in Switzerland was then weakened by the dislocation of Catholic communities, and the increase of Protestant states. In the 19th century, with the creation of Switzerland
